Mariposa Corner Sofa
Developed by Vitra in Switzerland
Design: Edward Barber and Jay Osgerby, 2020

Vitra expands in collaboration with Edward Barber and Jay Osgerby, the Mariposa Sofa collection with new variations: The Mariposa Corner.

"A sofa is a platform for everyday life; people can read, watch TV, they eat on the sofa or work on their laptop in the evening – it is a platform for many different activities," explain Edward Barber and Jay Osgerby, who designed the first version of the Mariposa Sofa in 2014.

The sofas of the Mariposa family owe their extraordinary comfort to the pleasantly soft all-over upholstery and the ingenious adjustment mechanism in the arm and backrest elements. These can be continuously adjusted to an outward angle of approximately 30°. The variously sized Mariposa models fulfil a range of different functions, from the armchair or love seat to the 2-seater and 2½-seater sofas to the large 3-seater.

The collection has now been further expanded with Mariposa Corner. This comfortable corner sofa provides spacious seating and is just the right configuration for many interior settings.
